Quarterly Commentary

With an ode to Don McLean lyrics, the 4th Quarter could be called the “Quarter that Energy died.” The price of oil declined on an accelerated basis. Natural gas prices also took a belated dive toward the back half of the quarter. As a result, in a quarter with plus signs in front of all the other market sector returns, the Energy space finished with a big, fat, negative dash in front of its quarterly return and became the focal point of the market and its plethora of pundits. Despite this one-sided, deeply sloped market slide within a singular industry, the overall US Equity market still managed to deliver on aggregate a positive quarter and year. For US Small Cap, its version of a football Hail Mary was required to finish the year with a plus sign after a miserable 3rd Quarter. As happens in a trailing team’s dream, Small Cap returns, measured by the Russell 2000, caught that Hail Mary pass and came back with a vengeance in the 4th Quarter, beating their SMID, Mid and Large Cap brethren to finish with a positive year return – albeit one of the lowest in 35 years of the Russell 2000 Index. But the winner (as measured by the major Russell indices) in US Equity for 2014 is.... Mid Cap Value. Also of note, the annual return difference between Large and Small Cap was the largest since 1998 (the year of Long-term Capital, et al).

Although in the beginning it looked like 2014 was shaping up to be a Value dominated year in SMID Cap, Growth’s 3rd and 4th Quarter outperformance caught it up and the two basically tied.

As for the GW Capital portfolio, we were disappointed to underperform both the Russell 2500 and Russell 2500 Value for the 2nd time in a row last quarter. The past two quarters have been our second worst relative performance in back-to-back quarters since the product’s inception in 2006 (the worst was in 2008). This negative turn came on the heels of outperforming in the first half of 2014.

Specific to 4th Quarter 2014, underperformance was again driven by a combination of Sector Allocation and Issue Selection. Unlike last quarter, the larger detractor was our Sector Allocation with the portfolio’s overweight to Energy being the biggest culprit and Issue Selection in Financials a close runner-up.

Starting with Sector Allocation, as mentioned, the quarter was a horrific one for Energy stocks in general. The decline in oil and gas pricing especially hurt valuations of smaller cap exploration and production (E&P) companies as they tend to be more levered and a sustained downturn in pricing could impact their ability to make debt payments. As such, the Energy sector return in the Russell 2500 index declined more than 30% in the quarter. Our SMID Cap portfolios have more than twice the Energy sector weighting as the Russell 2500 (Value and Core). In a quarter when all the other market sectors had positive returns, such an overweight becomes a significant drag on portfolio performance. There were a couple other minor detractors in sector allocation, but nothing near the magnitude of the Energy overweight. Not much good news to report, except our overweight to the Consumer Staples sector added modest value.

As noted, aside from the damage done by our Energy overweight, the second largest hurt put on the portfolio last quarter was Issue Selection within Financials. Two of our bottom three performing stocks were Financials. Both stocks had large double-digit negative returns. Although the rest of our Financials holdings managed to deliver an absolute positive return overall for the sector, these two brought down our Financials performance too much to make a relative contribution versus the benchmark. We have sold out of one of the stocks, but held the other. Our worst performing stock, not surprisingly, was an Energy holding. However, in aggregate, we had other Energy stocks perform better than the market so our net Energy holdings ended up performing relatively in-line with the market sector. On the plus side, we held several names with positive double-digit returns in a variety of sectors. On a relative basis to the benchmark, our top performers were in the Materials space where we outperformed the market sector return by more than 900 bps in aggregate.

Quarterly Commentary

On the transactions front, it was a relatively active quarter in terms of new buys and sells. We bought five new stocks and sold five stocks outright. We also added to two existing positions.

We enter 2015 with a cautiously optimistic view balanced by the stronger economic growth of recent quarters yet mitigated by concerns regarding widening high yield spreads and challenges facing the Energy sector and elements of the global economy. We keep our economic outlook of Two steps forward – One and a half steps back. Our economic eye continues to be wary of China, with economic reports there remaining mixed and the country still in a longer-term, downward trend. However, we are watchful that sustained reduction in commodity pricing (such as oil) could be helpful in reversing that trend. Europe continues to have its struggles and renewed speculation on problems in Greece aren't helping. Geopolitical risks and easing rates and monetary policy in Europe and Japan have provided a tailwind for the US Dollar. Although modest, an uptick in volatility measures for the US equity markets continued in the quarter, primarily driven by weakness in the Energy sector. Overall, the economy remains resilient. Following an impressive 4.6% growth in the 2nd Quarter, the latest GDP report for the 3rd Quarter has it beat at 5% growth. Concerns regarding leverage in the Energy sector are permeating the high yield bond markets and spreads there widened again last quarter to levels not seen since mid-2013. However, they remain modestly inside historical averages, but are now a decent amount off the tightness seen early in the year.
